Managing a convenience store used to be a pretty straightforward job. Customers stopped by to fill up their vehicles, to grab a quick snack, to pick up a paper or to make a last-minute purchase – and the manager's job was just to make it happen.

How times have changed. To be successful today, convenience stores must offer an ever-expanding assortment of products and services, all of which require a broader range of management skills. Careful attention must now be paid to everything from merchandising and inventory to cash management and foodservice.

With StorePoint BackOffice, however, easy-to-use technology makes managing an increasingly complex business environment simpler than ever before. By integrating cash, inventory, fuel management and more into one comprehensive system, BackOffice dramatically drives efficiency and profitability across every facet of your business.

SIMPLIFYING C-STORE MANAGEMENT

Truly effective C-store management depends on dozens of variables. That's why Retalix StorePoint BackOffice brings together all aspects of the business into a single, easy-to-use interface. From a centralized, comprehensive location, store managers can access cash, inventory, operations and fuel management.

In each case, users gain incredible visibility into the costs, processes and people that make their convenience store thrive. Detailed reports provide information for immediate action. Inventory, for example, can be managed at the department or item level, with support for either cost or retail accounting.

What's more, StorePoint BackOffice offers complete support for branded quick-service restaurant operations, including detailed, in-depth functions such as recipe management, kitchen monitoring, production planning and waste reduction. With or without a QSR, StorePoint is the recipe for management success.

So point your store in the right direction by learning more about StorePoint today.
